Dean Smith Views Future

School of Dentistry Aims At Decade of Expansion

The University School of Dentistry will end its tenth school year at the commencement, June 7. At this juncture, Dean Charles T. Smith views the future with much faith. The dean visualizes a growth that will double present facilities.

In planning for an expansion of the School of Dentistry, Dr. Smith has submitted a ten-year projection to the administration in which the needs have been outlined. They include research space, a graduate school, space for dental technicians and assistants, and facilities for intramural practice.

...The School is including a program of world mission in its planning. Dr. Smith says that it is the desire to train the students for mission appointments and other work in foreign fields. Right now the dean hopes to place students and graduates with Seventh-day Adventist dentists in various parts of the world.

"We are eying the world mission because we feel our students should be involved in a high level mission work throughout the world," states Dr. Smith. There are calls not only for pioneers but also for second men for which our students could be available, says he.

On Restorative Dentistry

One special project with mission potential has full attention of the dean. To provide restorative dental work in lesser developed areas, two students have developed the Loma Linda New-Drive. In a layman's language it is a unit that will make it possible to restore dental hygiene (by filling cavities) without pulling teeth when they otherwise could be saved.

Great interest has been evident among those who work in mission fields to restore dental health. Small airplanes cannot carry heavy equipment for restorative dentistry. Missionary dentists have long considered undesirable the somewhat easier solution in dental hygiene — the pulling of teeth.

With four bicycle pumps and two skin diving pumps, the compact, portable control unit for a high speed handpiece can be used in any remote area where water and electricity are not available.

The two students are William E. Newton and Richard I. Staley, both juniors. Mr. Newton now has formed a company that will produce the units. He said the idea came to him after he met Dr. Walter C. F. Harbart of San Clemente, California. Dr. Harbart, a friend of Loma Linda University, had invented an air-operated valve which Mr. Newton used as the basic unit for his portable device, the Loma Linda New-Drive.

It is through this spirit of world mission and this vision of growth, University officials have observed, that the ten-year-old School of Dentistry has proved its maturity and its place among older institutions. Says Dr. Smith: With the support of our alumni, the National Association of Seventh-day Adventist Dentists (NASDAD) and the Century Club, this school can look forward to a great growth with a world wide mission.

Atlantic Union College alumni, friends and former students will meet March 8 at the Glendale City Seventh-day Adventist Church, 610 East California Avenue, for a potluck dinner.

Drs. Hunt, Mann To Arizona Meet

Assistant Dean 'Preaches What She Practices'

Members of the Kalindha Club, Kate Lindsay Hall organization, recently heard Assistant Dean Helen S. Menkel stress the importance of women doing something creative, something of their own and making good use of free time.

She told how she became interested in painting, writing, drawing, sculpturing, rug making, stamp and coin collecting.

Club President DeEtta M. Eisenman, PT'64, says of Mrs. Menkel, "She is an example of one who has developed her talents and takes a lasting interest in a variety of hobbies. We wanted to hear her preach what she practices."

Dr. Eldon C. Boyd Dies in Los Angeles

A 1950 graduate of the School of Medicine, Eldon Curtis Boyd, 1207 Carmona Avenue, Los Angeles, died February 22 at the age of 41.

Burial was February 27 in Los Angeles.

Prior to setting up a private practice, Dr. Boyd was head pathologist at the Rancho Los Amigos Hospital in Downey from 1956 to 1962.

In addition, he served an internship at the Los Angeles County General Hospital and was affiliated at various times with the Cedars of Lebanon, Long Beach Veterans hospitals and with the White Memorial Medical Center.

He served in the United States Army and achieved the rank of major in the Reserve Corps.

About 325 persons gathered February 23 for the awards dinner, climax of the fourth annual School of Dentistry alumni-student convention, where Larry V. Smith, SD'65, and John P. DeVincenzo, SD'64, received first prize in the basic science division for their table clinic, "Observations Concerning Normal and Abnormal Teeth."

The table clinic will compete in the fall at the American Dental Association Convention in San Francisco.

Louis T. Benezet, PhD, president of the Claremont Graduate School and University Center, made the after-dinner speech on "The Profession of Human Understanding." He was introduced by Charles T. Smith, dean of the School of Dentistry.

Speaking to the group at the Azure Hills Country Club on man's need for a mission in life, he said, "Your activities reflect the desire of man to reach beyond himself. Loma Linda University has a very special mission in the church which it serves."

The three ingredients in a man which are required in order for him to fulfill a mission in life he outlined as something to offer, a sense of what is needed and a willingness to serve.

Anyone who today chooses a profession, he said, in order to have something to offer faces much hard work.

Elaborating on the second requirement, Dr. Benezet stressed that what is really needed is good human relations. He warned against becoming entangled in techniques and forgetting good human relations, without which "knowledge will come to naught."

The will to serve, he said, is the key quality of all. "Without a sense of humanity there is no success."

Dr. Benezet concluded his address by stating, "I have a great admiration for your church and University, because they imbue people with a willingness to take knowledge and understanding where it is needed.

"To leave comfort, to choose to do the hard thing, to go serve someone else — this is really the practice of the profession of human understanding."

Richard L. Halburg, SD'64, student chairman of the convention, awarded prizes for the table clinics. For his work on the convention he received an AM-FM radio from the Dental Students Association.

Both he and Delmar L. Herrick, SD'64, master of ceremonies at the dinner and president of the Dental Students Association, were presented a plaque by the School of Dentistry Alumni Association, in appreciation for their efforts to make the convention a success. Hugh C. Love, SD'61, president of the alumni association, made the presentation.

Speaker, Panel Outline Women's Role in Providing Cultural Milieu

By CARROL MILLS

A lively panel discussion entitled "Your Place in the Sun" highlighted last week's meeting for women attending the fourth annual School of Dentistry alumni-student convention.

Impetus for the discussion came from the keynote speaker, Mrs. Raymond A. Beeler, president of the associates of the Redlands Bowl and first vice president of the Redlands Community Music Association.

Mrs. Beeler opened the day's activities at Azure Hills Country Club, Grand Terrace, with a speech on "A Lady's Place in the Cultural Life of Her Community."

Emphasizing the need for women to put down roots in their community, she said, "This is no time for women to be inadequate. It is time for them to make sure that cultural life keeps abreast with scientific progress."

"What are you doing for the cultural life of your community," she asked, adding that husbands depend on their wives to make contacts outside of their own profession that they have no time to make.

Mrs. Beeler proceeded to relate the story of how Grace S. Mullen, of Redlands, has succeeded in fulfilling her dream of music for everyone by establishing the Redlands Bowl summer concert series which is provided for the community free of charge.

She concluded with a quotation from Secretary of the Interior Stewart L. Udall in which he said, we must get clear in our minds the difference between meaningful arts and entertainment. The battle is to get Americans to appreciate art. It is through the efforts of women in the community that such an achievement will be made.

Panel Discussion Follows

Immediately following the keynote speech came the panel discussion moderated by Oliver L. Jacques, University director of public relations. On the panel were Mrs. Melvin R. Lund, former sponsor of the Junior Dental Auxiliary, which directed the women's activities; Mrs. Willis L. Schlenker, first president of the auxiliary; Robert D. McIntyre, pastor of the Colton Seventh-day Adventist Church; and Thomas J. Zwemer, DDS, chairman of the department of orthodontics.

The panel explored the roles which the wife of a professional man should play in the community.

Foremost in the woman's life, the panel agreed, should be an effort to please God. "If she doesn't start here, said Dr. Zwemer, "she will have only a cheap facade. She must start on the inside and extend herself outward. If she looks for the approbation of God, she will grow and encompass successfully other activities in life."

Mrs. Edward P. Johnston, president of the Junior Dental Auxiliary, was in charge of ladies' activities conducted at the Azure Hills Country Club during the School of Dentistry alumni-student convention last week.

Second only to God in the woman's life should come her husband and family, the panel decided. The whole man requires a complete wife, therefore a woman should take advantage of every opportunity to broaden her experiences and knowledge, a panel member advised.

After establishing the woman's relationship to God and her home, the panel discussed her place in the community.

Should Join Community

It stressed the need for expressing an interest in the community by joining organizations devoted to its betterment. Mrs. Schlenker pointed out that Seventh-day Adventists need to mingle constructively with persons of other faiths. There need be no sacrifice of principles, said Mrs. Lund, because everyone interested in the community has the same interests at heart. The wife of a professional man, she said, is expected to be active.

Pastor McIntyre agreed, saying, "We can make friends and demonstrate that in spite of being a 'peculiar people' we aren't 'oddballs.'"

In addition to such community organizations, Mr. Jacques emphasized the numerous opportunities for involvement in service organizations such as the Red Cross. He urged that women not limit themselves to the programs of the church, but also join corresponding groups outside the church.

Aiding the underprivileged was discussed by the panel as an opportunity for service, with one member voicing the opinion that counties usually provide a good financial program. He continued that an educational program on cooking, marketing and money management would be of more value than cash contributions.

Another member pointed out the need for approaching such persons as people and friends rather than as "the poor."

In closing, the panel cautioned the women against becoming merely an accessory to their husbands' profession. It advised that women should find themselves as persons and serve in their own light.

After the panel discussion a luncheon was served, for which Alan Chapple, DDS, provided background music on the piano. He also played for a fashion show which followed.

Models for the show were auxiliary members: Mrs. Marvin H. Fitzgerald, Mrs. George P. Foust, Mrs. Donald M. Hickman, Mrs. Harold D. Lambeth, Mrs. David W. Metzdorf, Mrs. Walter C. Pitts, Mrs. Alonzo D. Proctor and Mrs. Stanley A. Squier.

Concluding feature for the day's activities was a demonstration, "Better Teeth for Our Children Through Audiovisual Education." In charge were Mrs. Lester H. Lonergan and Mrs. Clinton C. Emmerson.
