Class Poem

Affectionately addressed to the Nurses'
Class of 1913, at Loma Linda, Cal.

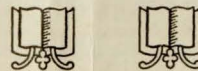

BY L. D. SANTEE

What though the storms rage in the desert,
What matter though danger appalls,
'Tis the life of a Nurse to be faithful,
We shall find you "Where Suffering Calls."
And at last when your labor is ended,
You can joy in the work you have done,
Your record both faithful and splendid,
As you stand in the light of the sun.

When Christ in his gladness shall render
Rewards that this world hath not seen,
In the glory of heaven's own splendor,
May be found the Class—Nineteen Thirteen.
"Where Suffering Calls," is your motto;
There is glorious work to be done,
With your uniforms white as the snowdrift,
And the bands on your caps, Twenty-one.

May your lives be complete in their beauty;
You are pointing the world to the light,
By the faithful performance of duty,
You are climbing life's infinite height;
The forces of life you may rally,
And say to the dying one "live."
They are brought up again from death's valley,
And saved, by the treatments you give.

There is gladness and smiles on your faces,
As clouds wear the smile of the sun.
Soon others will fill up your places,
And learn of the work to be done.
With the blessing of God resting o'er you,
On your foreheads the sweet sunlight falls,
With duties and triumphs before you,
We shall find you "Where Suffering calls."
